Sandusky County is in the midst of the Migration Highway, which gives us the opportunity to see many species of birds. We also have the second largest concentration of nesting Bald Eagles in the state.

Great birding spots include Pickerel Creek Wildlife Area, Blue Heron Reserve, White Star Park, Wolf Creek, Creek Bend Farm and other parks within the county.

WHEN?

WHAT AND WHERE

January Midwinter brings small visitors from the north. They find shelter in meadows, woodlands and marshes. You can find a variety of waterfowl wherever there is an opening in the river, bay, or lake ice.

February The moderating temperatures in the last half of the month may bring the first robins, killdeer, woodcock and blackbirds.

March After the frozen marshes begin to thaw the flights of migrating waterfowl begin. Early flights of Pintails, Mallards, Tundra Swans, Black Ducks and many other follow the freeze line.

April Spring migration increases in intensity, bringing over 300 species of birds to the area. Lots of raptors, the first waves shorebirds, and a wide variety of songbirds appear.

The Biggest Week in American Birding

May 6-15, 2014

WHEN?

WHAT AND WHERE

- May Warbler-mania strikes, thirty-seven species of these colorful songbirds come to the area to rest and refuel before continuing their journey.
- June Nesting season begins, each bird finds their favorite habitat (field, thicket, tree-top, marsh). Birding is at its best. Last of the shorebirds are heading north.
- July Singing begins to wane; nesters are busy with nestlings. Watch for incursions by southern breeding waders such as the Little Blue Heron. The first southbound sandpipers and plovers appear.
- August Height of migration for southbound Shorebirds, on mudflats or marshes of any kind.
- September The Warblers return in numbers in the fall. However, they're quieter and duller in color.
- October Indians call this the "Month of Sparrows" – in weed patches everywhere. A few you might see are the White-throated Sparrow, Swamp Sparrow and Fox Sparrow.
- November Migrant songbirds have mostly cleared out. Huge flocks of Bonaparte's Gulls and Red-breasted Merganser invade. Marshes can be thick with waterfowl.
- December Winter sets in and shorter days sometimes bring boreal songbirds such as Red-breasts, Common Redpoll, and White-Winged Crossbill.
